INTEGRATED SCHOOL OF OCEAN SCIENCES

ISOS Course

Writing Lab

PD Dr. Avan N. Antia, Integrated School of Ocean Sciences
4 + 5 and 8 + 9 September 2014 | 09:00 -13:00 hrs

Practice, Practice, Practice is probably the most urgent need for those trying to achieve proficiency in scientific writing. Whether you are writing a paper, report, abstract or any other scientific publication you will need several rounds of writing, reviewing, editing and polishing a publication before you start feeling comfortable with and even enjoying the process! This Writing Lab focuses on producing publishable text for each participant.

| Distilling the message

- Mind Mapping
- Make a first sketch

| From Sketch to Text

- Formulating sentences from thoughts
- Joining thoughts in paragraphs
- Maintaining the “red line”

| Words, Words, Words

- Choose the exact word
- Use synonyms and antonyms
- Keep it simple but not trivial

| Parts of the paper

- Attributes of the abstract, intro, results and discussion
- Where to place what?

| Make a good paper great

- Get cited, not just printed
- Get the “Meta” message
